

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Low-Stress Handling in the Veterinary Clinic

1. Veterinary behavioural medicine

The advent of animal behaviour studies

Behavioural medicine

The role of the veterinary professional

How to identify a behavioural problem

What is a behavioural problem?

2. The emotional world of cats and dogs and agonistic behaviour

Identifying emotions

Fear and anxiety

Agonistic behaviours

3. Communication

In dogs

In cats

4. Nonassociative learning

Habituation

Sensitisation

Exposure to new stimuli

5. Associative

learning

Classical conditioning

Operant conditioning

6. Behaviour modification techniques

Systematic desensitisation

Classical counterconditioning

Operant counterconditioning

Extinction

Flooding

7. Travelling to the clinic

Home treatment

Training to use a carrier

The car journey

Handling on the lead

Placing a muzzle

8. The reception and waiting room

Entrance

Reception

Waiting room

9. Consultations

Consultation room

Equipment

Protocols

10. Hospitalisation

The hospitalisation area

Intensive care unit (ICU)

Rest

Visits from owners

11. Pheromone

therapy

What are pheromones?

Pheromone release sites

Pheromone therapy

12. Psychopharmacology

Anxiolytics

Antidepressants

Mood stabilisers

Antipsychotics

α -2 Agonists

Practical sedation protocols

13. Handling techniques

Guiding or luring

Venipuncture

Examining the head

Towel techniques

Syringe extension

Ninja technique

Appendix

BIBLIOGRAPHY.